- 1. The Preamble of the Constitution states that the purpose of the Constitution is to establish a more perfect Union, insure domestic tranquility, provide for the common defense, promote the general welfare, and secure the blessings of liberty to ourselves and our posterity.

We the people of the United States, in order to form a more perfect Union, establish justice, insure domestic tranquility, provide for the common defense, promote the general welfare, and secure the blessings of liberty to ourselves and our posterity, do ordain and establish this constitution for the United States of America.

First, the preamble specifies that what is being promulgated constitutes "this" - a term that refers unmistakably to the actual written 3. 671 (1995). And finally, where the Constitution does not say anything at a 3, it simply does not say anything about the subject and cannot be used to overturn the decisions of the representative government. 2 Joseph Story, comments on the Constitution of the United States 462 to 445 (1833). Michael Stokes Paulsen, the Constitution prescribes rules for its 3 interpretation, 103 NW. U. 2706 (2003). None of these institutions of government, created or recognized by the constitution, are superior to the final power of the people to adopt, alter and interpret what is, after all, the constitution ordered and established by "the people of the United States. This essay is part of a discussion on the preamble with Erwin Chemerinsky, Dean and Distinguished Professor of Law, and Raymond Pryke Professor of First Amendment Law, University of California, Irvine Law School. ; If one promotes, and the other defeats, common defense, shouldn't the first, on the 3 principles of interpretation to be adopted? We Are freedom, in any principle of reason, or common sense, to adopt a restrictive meaning, What will defeat a declared object of the Constitution, when another equally natural and more appropriate for the object A before ?? Finally, the preamble has important implications for who have the ultimate power of constitutional interpretation. Lj 217 (1994). Although the preamble does not confer powers and rights, it does imply significant 3, both for how the constitution must be interpreted and applied and which has the power of constitutional interpretation - the two major general questions of constitutional law 3. Consider two ways of large images that the preamble affects as the constitution to be interpreted. Michael Stokes Paulsen, Captain James T. Explore key historical documents that inspired the Framers of the Constitution and each amendment during the drafting process, the early drafts and major proposals behind each provision, and discover how the drafters deliberated, agreed and disagreed, on the path to compromise and the final text. As Justice Joseph Story put it in his treatise on the Constitution, published in 1833, using the example of the Preamble's phrase to "provide for the common defence" "No one can doubt, that this does not enlarge the powers of congress to pass any measures, which they may deem useful for the common defence. But suppose the terms of a given power admit of two constructions, the one more restrictive, the other more liberal, and each of them is consistent with the words - Michael Stokes Paulsen, The Irrepressible Myth of Marbury, 101 Mich. No. are they mere springboards or points of departure for individual (or judicial) speculation or one's subjective preferences: where the provisions of the Constitution set forth a sufficiently clear rule for government, that rule constitutes the supreme law of the land and must be followed. The Preamble does not confer powers or rights, but the provisions that follow should be interpreted in a fashion consistent with the purposes for which they were enacted. America has no unwritten constitution. Ours is a system of written constitutionalism of adherence to a single, binding, authoritative, written legal text as supreme law. James Madison, one of the leading architects of the Constitution, put it best in The Federalist No. 49: "The people are the only legitimate fountain of power, and it is from them that the constitutional charter, under which the several branches of government hold their power, is derived. Further Reading: Michael Stokes Paulsen & Luke Paulsen, The Constitution: An Introduction (2015) 1 and 2). Read the full discussion here. This defines the 3 and borders of constitutional argument last leg: the constitutional interpretation company will seek to understand faithfully, within the context of the document (including the times and places in which it was written and adopted), the words, phrases and structural 3 of the written text. The words of the Constitution are not optional. Michael Stokes Paulsen, the most dangerous branch: executive power to say which law, 83 geo. The preamble can have much to say - quietly - about how the constitution should be interpreted and that it has the supreme power of constitutional interpretation. By the same token, where the provisions of the Constitution do not establish a rule, where they leave open matters - the decision on such matters must remain open to the people, acting through the institutions of representative democracy. See Text Page 2 The Preamble "or A" CLAN USEIRA DE ENACTING A Rev. This is obvious and extremely 3. And yet, while it is true that the courts legitimately possess the proof of constitutional interpretation in cases that come before them, it is equally true that the other branches of the national government and the state government also possess a responsibility of faithful constitutional interpretation. It promotes a written constitution, with all that that implies. Kirk and the constitutional interpretation company: Some modest proposals from the 21st Century, 59 Albany L. 857 (2009). L. In modern times, it has become elegant to identify the power of constitutional interpretation almost exclusively with the decisions of the courts, and particularly the Supreme Court of the U.S.. It shall not be open to courts, legislatures or any other government officials to "Netsitsnoc. Netsnoc.
